

Translator package

TODO: main translator package documentation

Disable translator package by ACI

To toggle the translator package for a role, you'll need to interact with the ACL (Access Control List). In the `Zf_acl_rules` table, you'll find two specific rights related to the translator package for each role:

- editorPackageExport: Controls the ability to export translator packages.
- editorPackageReimport: Governs the ability to re-import translator packages.

To clarify, it's important to note that both rights (`editorPackageExport` and `editorPackageReimport`) must be removed to effectively disable the translator package for a role. Removing only one of these rights won't fully disable the functionality. Once both rights are removed from the `Zf_acl_rules` table associated with the role, users with that role will no longer have access to the buttons for exporting and re-importing translator packages in the user interface (UI).
